Frequently Asked Questions...

- Is this a school? No. We offer tutorial services in support of homeschooling families in Maryland. We believe that parents are a child's best teacher, and your status as homeschoolers will not change. As such, you are still responsible for homeschooling under county or umbrella oversight and meeting state or umbrella requirements. But we are here to help!
- What do I teach at home? As a homeschooling parent, you establish your educational goals and direct the home instruction of your child. Our tutors are here to support you. In order to be compliant with state-mandated requirements, parents should, at minimum, provide instruction in health, music, physical education, and art. Our tutors also encourage additional schooling in language arts and math, based on your educational goals and individual plans developed in coordination with the tutors.
- What are my responsibilities as a member of the co-op? Great capacity comes from working together, and we rely on family participation to help our co-op run smoothly. Everyone has a say, and everyone pitches in! We host mandatory parent meetings and parent-tutor conferences. Our members help in many other ways as well. Some of those ways include assisting with preparing materials, chaperoning field trips, organizing classroom experiences and supplies, volunteering time and expertise to lead enriching activities, and more!
